Peak Performers: Young local athletes to watch in the future

A half-dozen youngsters who 'got next' out on the snow
 News FOLLOW NEWS | March 7, 2020

Summit local Forest Woodard, 11, has been nominated as a young Summit County athlete to watch as part of the youth sports component of the Summit Daily's Peak Performers project, which honors the greatest athletes and most important figures in Summit County skiing and snowboarding history.

Editor's note: As part of our Peak Performers project, which honors readers' submissions for the best and most meaningful skiers and snowboarders in Summit County history, we asked readers another question: to nominate young talented local athletes who may just be in contention for such an honor years from now.

From accomplished ski mountaineers to talented and stylish young snowboarders, here are a few young Summit County winter sports athletes to keep an eye out for in the future, according to you, the readers. Be sure to go to SummitDaily.com/peakperformers to read up on the more than 40 finalist nominees across snowboarding, freestyle skiing, Alpine skis and Nordic skis for the adult categories.
